Restoration House WNC, a nonprofit organization based in Western North Carolina, supports some of the region's smallest, most overlooked rural communities still grappling with the long-term impacts of Hurricane Helene. They focus on smaller, often overlooked counties that continue to experience deep, lasting devastation from Hurricane Helene.

Current Work:

The Mountain Meals program was created in direct response to Hurricane Helene. The week before the storm made landfall, the region's leading meal delivery service shut down, leaving hundreds without access to food, many of whom were elderly, disabled, or without transportation. They launched Mountain Meals to fill that gap in the wake of Helene's destruction. Today, the program delivers hot, home-cooked meals to individuals and families still recovering from the housing loss, economic instability and isolation.

The Recovery Community Center is another piece of our long-term recovery effort. Peer Support Specialists play a central role, offering experienced guidance that helps guests feel seen, understood, and supported in taking the next steps in their recovery journey. We provide showers, laundry, a MANNA food pantry, therapeutic services, and case management for individuals experiencing homelessness or housing instability. Many have lost everything to Helene and have struggled to find support. The Day Center creates a safe space where people can restore their dignity, connect to resources and begin the path toward stability.

What's Next:

Restoration House is launching transitional housing initiative to provide safe, short-term housing for individuals exiting the crisis. This project will strengthen our continuum of care, allowing us to pair housing with wraparound services and long-term support.

Why it Matters:

Swain County has the lowest life expectancy in North Carolina, a stark reflection of the deep disparities in health and housing outcomes across the region. Residents face higher rates of chronic illness, preventable deaths and premature mortality than any other part of the state. These outcomes are compounded by poverty, substance use and lack of access to care. The public health crisis in the region demands urgent, sustained investment.

Your help can ensure every resident of Swain County has access to the support they need to recover- reclaiming stability, health and hope in the process.

Thank you for your support!
